The National Council of Jewish Women presents the 46th annual Designer Dress Days in typical high style, offering exclusive designer clothing, accessories, purses and fine jewelry.

Clothing by such luxury labels as Armani, Valentino, St. John, Burberry and more are for purchase at this event which began small, but has grown tremendously, with attendees signing up at the door.

Money raised from Designer Dress Days supports the NCJW community service projects aimed at filling the needs of women, children and families in the Greater Cleveland area. A variety of programs benefit, including helping individuals with mental illness through the Jewish holidays.

The event begins with a Preview Day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 24, with a cost of $20 for this fundraiser. Held at the Mandel Jewish Community Center, those who take advantage of the Preview Day get a first look at the exclusive offerings, most of which are gently used but also new items donated from a variety of stores.

The event continues from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 26 and from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 27-28.

The event, which has an extremely loyal following, is perfect for anyone who wants to get a great buy on exclusive designer clothing. There will be close to 10,000 pieces for sale. Items will be displayed beautifully on racks, and purses and accessories will be in cases. Furs will also be on hand as well as evening gowns, suits and cashmere pieces.

Andrea Bachus of Shaker Heights models a Diane von Furstenberg knit grey dress priced at $75 at NCJW's Designer Dress Days. 216.378.2204 or visit ncjwcleveland.org/what-we-do/designer-dress-days/.
